VENUE SYNOPSIS

Built in 1972 and designed by the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation, the San Jose Center for the Performing Arts sits just across the street from the Convention Center. The one-of-a-kind building features large windows which fill the lobby with natural light and display spectacular views of historic downtown San Jose. If your meeting calls for a show or presentation, the beautiful, comfortable and flexible Center for the Performing Arts is your ticket. Complete with full-service box office, concessions and top-notch audio visual capabilities, the Center offers dual level, continental-style auditorium seating (no center aisle) with a capacity of up to 2,677.
